Five of the 15 National Women's History Project's 2018 Honorees

Pauli Murray (1910-1985)

Pauli Murray was a civil rights and women's rights activist decades ahead of her time. Facing lifelong discrimination based on her race and sex, she persisted and became an accomplished attorney, author, activist, academic, and spiritual leader.

Marty Langelan

A leader in the global effort to end harassment and gender-based violence, Marty Langelan is called "the godmother of direct intervention." She's an economist, martial artist, past president of the DC Rape Crisis Center, and the author of Back Off: How to Confront and Stop Sexual Harassment. She's been derailing harassers for decades.

Elizabeth Peratrovich (Kaaxal.gat)(1911-1958)

An Alaska Native of the Tlingit nation, Elizabeth Peratrovich was a civil rights leader ahead of her time. Her activism led to passage of the Alaska Territory's first anti-discrimination act (1945).

Linda Spoonster Schwartz

Linda Spoonster Schwartz overcame a military injury to become one of the nation's leading veterans' advocates, focusing especially on the unmet needs of women veterans. The Honorable Linda Spoonster Schwartz has served our country, since 1967, as an Air Force Nurse, veteran advocate and public servant. After 16 years of Military Service, she was medically retired after sustaining injuries in a 1983 aircraft accident, while serving as a USAF Flight Nurse. She looked to the Veterans Administration (VA) for help but found a pervasive attitude of neglect toward women veterans (inadequate facilities, lack of privacy, and physicals that didn't include breast or gynecological exams). Inspired to make a difference and impervious to her injuries, she earned a Master's from Yale School of Nursing and Doctorate in Public Health from Yale School of Medicine.

Arlene B. Mayerson

For over 35 years Arlene Mayerson has been a leading attorney in disability rights law, including playing a key role in drafting and negotiating the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) and amendments to the Individuals with Disabilities Education Act (IDEA), litigating precedent setting disability rights cases and teaching disability rights law.
